The Romero Lectures:

The Intersection of Faith and Practice

The Romero Lectures are designed to provoke our thinking by examining the role of the church in civil society in promoting social justice for all creation. Lecturers are distinguished scholars, community leaders, justice activists, ministers, and educators. Topics include the intersections of our faith with justice practice in areas such as the environment, immigration, human rights, racism, economics, gender, etc. The Romero Lectures include a keynote address, panel discussions, workshops, worship, celebration, and fellowship.
